State Library Launches WorkSC Web Site

Columbia, S.C. – The South Carolina State Library has launched a new web site, WorkSC.org, to assist libraries, state government agencies and employees, and citizens locate useful resources on the many facets of workforce development. The site, initially created with libraries and first-time job seekers in mind, offers many useful links for the beginning as well as seasoned job seeker.

Organized in an easy to use format, the web site features job news, a calendar of events, and links to featured job-related resources. WorkSC.org visitors can learn how to create free email accounts, how to use Microsoft Word to write a resume, access job training tutorials and links to training opportunities hosted at libraries. Libraries and other workforce development organizations will soon be able to submit events for the calendar.

Additionally, users can find links to South Carolina specific as well as national job listing sites along with helpful tips for job searching and building interview skills. There are also Resources for starting a business and tips for thriving in the workplace after finding a job.

About the S.C. State Library

The South Carolina State Library is the primary administrator of federal and state support for the state's libraries. The Library is a national model for innovation, collaboration, leadership and effectiveness. The Library's mission is to optimize South Carolina's investment in library and information services. In 1969, as the result of action by the General Assembly, the State Library Board was redesignated as the South Carolina State Library and assumed responsibility for public library development, library service for state institutions, service for the blind and physically handicapped, and library service to state government agencies. Headquartered in Columbia, S.C., the Library is funded by the state of South Carolina, by the federal government through the Institute of Museum and Library Services, and other sources.
